Abstract

JSC SDG is a group of companies providing safe work consultancy services. The company was established in 2002 and has grown to the group of the companies. During the growth period organization faced various human resource management problems. One of the most significant issues are leadership. Recruiting suitable employees is a challenging aspect, as it affects the well-being of the employees and the goals of the organization.

Keywords

Human resource management, recruitment, values, leaders.

*) THANKS TO RŪTA JASIENĖ, UAB SDG HR AND COMMUNICATION MANAGER

Company background

In 2002 established the consulting company SDG (Guarantor of Safe Work) has become a real partner of safe work of Lithuanian companies in a couple of years, consulting and training company managers and employees to work safely.

Since 2011, the company has grown from one single into a group of companies - JSC SDG (consultations and training), JSC SDG kodas (trade in work clothes and personal protective equipment), JSC SDG grupė (management of group companies), JSC SDG academy (driving training), JSC SDG statyba (services in the construction sector), VšĮ Saugi pradžia (social projects, support), consulting company OÜ Ohutu Töö Garant in Estonia and SIA Droša darba garantants in Latvia.

The services of the consulting company SDG are remarkable due to high intellectual requirements for the employees. 98 percent of all employees have higher education. The provided services need excellent understanding of legislation and its application to companies.

"Success is the result of effort! We made fewer mistakes than our competitors. We started with 2 services and today we offer over 250. The risk to fail is and will always be high and if we think about how to reduce it, we will never introduce new products. We trust the qualifications, education, intellectual abilities and creativity of our employees, therefore we entrust them to create new services." (Eduardas Jasas, President of the SDG Group).

SDG services –consultations and implementation of management systems, environmental protection, occupational health, engineering services, energy certification of employee, industrial safety, fire and civil safety, signs and registers, laboratory services, occupational risks, project management, lawyer services, accounting and HR services.

JSC SDG mission:

Share knowledge and ideas in order to create a safe, healthy, competitive, socially responsible and viable environment

JSC SDG vision:

An international innovative business and society partner.

JSC SDG values:

S – Skaidrūs (transparent)

D – Dinamiški (dynamic)

G – Garbingi (respectfull)

In September 2020, 213 employees are working in JSC SDG. The dynamics of employees' exchange rate is presented below:

A sudden management gap

In 2015, the Kaunas branch consisted of 30 employees, whose average age was about 45 years. In that year, the branch was challenged by a difficult situation. Ona, the head of the department, was already retired, but still working. One day she reported that she had severe oncological disease and was going out for treatment. At first an interim manager was appointed for a month, but then Rita announced that she would definitely not return to work. Thus, she was temporarily replaced by one of the employees from the department, and Rūta, the head of HR department, started looking for a new manager, because she realized that it would still be necessary to solve the issue.

Usually Rūta and her team preferred internal recruitment channel. The strategy to grow as an organisation with internal talents was successful, because employees knew the company, its culture, values and were loyal. They saw possibility for self realisation and career as well.

Standart recruitment process consisted of several stages:

At first Rūta was thinking about who could take a position from existing employees. If there was a suitable option, she would first talk to that person, then present the candidate to management board and to the president of SDG group, Eduardas Jasas, and if everyone agreed, then appoint an inner person.

However, if they could not find a suitable candidate within the organization, they would resort to external candidates as well.

Attraction of a new manager

Rūta's internal search was unsuccessful. All theoretically possible candidates lacked management experience and needed more time for growth.

It just happened that one person who had been in a managerial job for a long time was looking for a new job. Antanas was over fifty years old and had more than 20 years of leadership experience in public institutions.

Since the company just needed a head for the Kaunas branch, and a candidate was recommended here, the head of HR department Rūta thought that this person might be suitable. Selection interviews have begun. There were as many as 4 meetings: with HR department, the president of the SDG group of companies, and the interim head of the Kaunas branch, and even more than once. The conversations were long, interfering with both 2 and 3 hours.

Rūta was sure that everything seemed to have been spoken, told, listened to with Antanas. She thought that even can predict how he would behave or not behave in one or another situation.

The ECASA project (2019-1-DE01-KA203-005037) is financed by Union funds (ERASMUS+). But the content of this document only reflects the views of the authors, and the European Commission cannot be held responsible for any use which may be made of the information contained therein.

Antanas' organizational skills, leadership, honesty and openness impressed everyone, although he was a little intimidated by differences in values: his work experience was just in public institutions, where all made decisions usually are "top-down". Antanas also had no experience in how to run business, which SDG executives saw as a minus. They were worried that he will understand his job as a CEO, and there is the usual "working manager as manager as well as a specialist" in the company, very similar to a "playing coach". However, it was estimated that the Kaunas branch is close to the headquarters, and its main manager and president is nearby at all times and, if necessary, he will be able to help and control in different situations. All the more so as the interim manager agreed to help only temporarily, as he had his own work to do, so a decision had to be made quickly. It seemed that they had talked to Antanas enough and he turned out to be a suitable candidate for the heads of Kaunas branch.

Therefore, the president of SDG Eduardas Jasas has made a final a decision to hire Antanas and appoint him the head of the Kaunas branch.

Rūta introduced Antanas to the company's values, common behaviour, code of ethics, introduced that they do a lot of meetings, that there is a lot of talking to employees and there is no need to book a meeting, that the door is open all the time and employees can come talk about their problems even with top managers. Antanas said he would also talk to all the staff.

The first days

For the first two days, Antanas was sitting in his office. He sat and did not communicate with his team. He delved into structures, into various formal things. And on the third day of work, Antanas, having set up meeting schedules for everybody to come in person at some point, started having those conversations with the employees. One hour was allotted for each conversation, but some were discussed longer, some shorter. The people who came out of those conversations felt very disgusting. Everything took place in one space and everyone saw what was going on. People came to the HR department and comforted that they felt interrogated. One employee, that was pregnant and had to take maternity holidays in one month, was kept in the office for two hours and had to present her future insights on her work.

Differences in Values

Increasingly, value and experience differences began to emerge that it wasn't their man. It was decided to talk to Antanas and advise him. The people from the HR department met with him and talked that maybe it is better to talk to the whole department together, present his vision as he sees the future, what it will be like, explained that in this company everybody communicate each other as an equal, not like a manager and dependant.

Antanas, listening to his colleagues, nodded understandingly, agreed with the suggestions and promised to do so.

After meeting with the staff of the HR department, Antanas convened a general meeting of the department and angrily said:

"Are you snitching on me?"

The person from the HR department attended the meeting so that she could actually hear with her ears how the meeting went. When she heard this phrase from Antanas, she throw her hands up in amazement because everything what he was doing was the opposite of what he had just promised.

Questions

1. What would you do in such a situation?
2. What errors and omissions would you identify in the selection process?
3. What are the values of UAB SDG and what are of the candidate?
4. Why do you think Antanas was the wrong candidate?
5. Prepare interview questions based on behaviour.

Aftermath

After the meeting, Rūta and her colleague talked to Antanas again and tried to explain that he was doing the wrong policy, that there would be nothing like that, because people would run away, good professionals would leave. It takes several years to grow up good specialists and if all leaves the company then it would simply not have someone to lead. And Eduardas Jasas, the president of SDG group, spoke with him, then went to the employees of the Kaunas branch, talked to them and made a decision. He decided that people were more important than the one person. Antanas, on the ninth day of his work, was offered to resign.

This mistake has brought great benefits to the company. People saw the difference between the company's executives and the person from outside. They saw what kind of executives can be. People appreciated that the president of the SDG group of companies chose the team instead of the manager, they understood how strongly they are valued.

Questions

1. What mistakes did the new manager make?
2. Was the decision to fire correct? If not, what needed to be done?
3. What should be the selection process to avoid such situations?

The main architect of the building is one of the employees of JSC SDG. The president Eduardas Jasas agreed to implement his ideas and construct a building which represents their core values, vision and mission. A lot of glass provides transparency in every day performance. Two separate but at the same time connected parts of the building represents dynamics and cooperation with partners and society. Various internal zones for relax shows that they respects differences and all people can find the most suitable place for them.

(g) Analysis and solution outline

A detailed case analysis and solution outline

Part I

1. What would you propose in this a situation?

Solution is to talk with Antanas in order to explain culture, values, routines, behaviour of UAB SDG. Also prepare proper adaptation plan.

2. What errors and omissions would you identify in the selection process?

During all recruitment process no colleagues from the department were involved. They could present their daily life and evaluate candidate also. RJPs (real job preview) also should be prepared in various forms: presentation, meetings, video, etc.

3. What are the values of UAB SDG and what are incompatible values of the candidate?

UAB SDG values are transparent, dynamic, respectful. Antanas values are not presented, just behaviour: threatening, individual talks, dictating.

4. Why do you think Antanas was the wrong candidate?

Candidate was jack in office, lacked respectability, used old fashion management methods.

Part II

1. What mistakes did the new manager make?

Antanas did not present himself and his future vision related to the work with all his team. His organized meetings were individual, which is uncharacteristic of this organization. His communication style was not respectable. Even after HR people comments about his inappropriate work style, he continued to work in the same style and even told the phrase „so you snitched me”.

2. Was the decision to fire correct? If not, what needed to be done?

Decision to fire was correct, because this person did not have the same values as all organisation. His further work would destroy department.

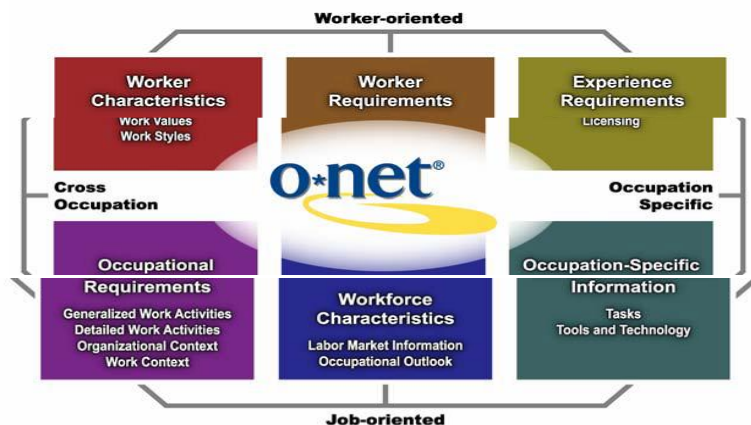

3. What should be the selection process to avoid such situations?

Preparation for the interview:

- RJPs (real job preview) should be prepared and applied.
- Requirements for work place should be prepared and applied (www.O'netonline.org model can be used)
- Prepared interview questions based on behaviour

Selection process:

- Several meetings for interview (the first with HR manager, the second – with the team (management Board, the third – with the president).
- During selection process questions and situations provided should be based on behaviour in the past and values evaluation.

Recruitment based on values

After recruitment- adaptation process:

- Appointment of the mentor for the adaptation period
- Preparation of adaptation plan, evaluation form including results, tasks and expectations.
- Consultations
